1.0 Political Contributions/DAYPAC

The Company does not make political contributions. The Company does cooperate with the legally organized state political action committee of its employees, known as DAYPAC.

Employee contributions to DAYPAC are used to support candidates that, regardless of party, are deemed most likely to support the Company's interests and values.

The Company's Vice President of Corporate Development acts as the advisor to DAYPAC to maximize the effectiveness of the use of the money in making meaningful contributions to deserving candidates.

The Company will, under no circumstances, reimburse employees for voluntary contributions to DAYPAC and will not apply any sort of pressure on employees or contributors.
